In the Rehabilitation Center for wounded war veterans among the Displaced Persons in the British Zone, these men learn the silversmith's art. All men in the picture are amputees, whose hope for the future depends not only on their willingness to work, but on someone giving them an opportunity.

Loving their former homelands, yet looking forward eagerly and earnestly to the new, Displaced Persons such as this Latvian woman and her neighbor children will bring fresh color and deep human qualities to communities in America and other countries. On ordinary days, the people in the camps, as in this one at Augustdorf in the British Zone of Germany, dress as we do, but love to reproduce the festivals of their homeland on special occasions.
